Girl: (on phone) O.K. Donna, we'll have services after the meeting and then a discussion on Israel...yes...the Rabbi will like it...O.K.....yeah...sure...see you later

Mother: Rachel, there's a girl here to see you.

Rachel: Oh, hi Christine.

Chris: Hi Rachel. Say, Rachel, you know I'm president of Signa Signa Signa at South?

Rachel: Yeah.

Chris: Well, we've been talking about it and have decided that we would like you to pledge the sorority.

Rachel: Wow! That's great. I've always wanted to be an SSS. I mean, it's an honor and all that.

Chris: There's just one thing. I hate to ask you this but alot depends on it. Are you Jewish?

Rachel: Jewish? Me? Why?

Chris: You see, we don't allow Jews in the sorority and the girls heard that you belonged to KCUSY. Is it true?

Rachel: Why, uh...no. Whatever gave you that idea? And I'd like to be in your sorority more than anything.

Boy: OK, OK...how's your sister?

Girl: She's going out with some goy. She's so dumb. My folks are so upset. I don't know why she does it.

Boy: Oh, by the way, are you still going out with the black guy?

Girl: Oh, john's fine. It's so great to be seen with a black person. It shows I'm not prejudiced.

Boy 2: Putting on T'fillin. I'm supposed to put them on in the morning before services.

Boy 1: What for?

Boy 1: No. I mean, why? What's the purpose?

Boy 2: How the hell should I know? I know how to put them on, isn't that enough?

Brenda: What do you want to do tonight, Melanie?

Melanie: I don't know. It's such a drag. Friday night and no date. What about you?

Brenda: Same here. Say, how about going to services and getting picked up? There are always some guys there for the Bat Mitzvah.

Melanie: Yeah. That'd be fun. Besides, I think the Rabbi's son has the hots for me. He's been hustling me all week in school.

Brenda: I'm sure I can get the car to go to shul. I'll pick you up at 7:30. What are you going to wear?

Sam: Sarah, when the war is over we will go to America so we do not have to hide our Judaism. So that we may pray in peace. It will be so good there.

****

Mother: Son, finish eating. We'll be late for services. And we should not be late on the High Holidays.

Son: Aw, Mom, I don't wanna go to services. Besides, I don't believe in that Jewish hocus pocus anymore.

Man, drop any phrase like that and you are automatically in.

You become anybody's token Jew.

Father: Look over there. Isn't that Mrs. Abrahamson's daughter Sherri?

Mother: My God. What has she done to her hair? And that dress. It makes her look 20 pounds heavier. Say, will you give a look at Mrs. Frankel. She just had to make sure that everyone saw how rich her husband is so she wore her mink stole. You'd think this was a fashion show instead of Yom Kippur services.

Father: Why are you wearing your full length fur coat then?

Mother: Oh, you know how cold it gets here since they air conditioned the sanctuary.
